Rights of the Offender in the Revocation Process

A. To: WILLIAMS, GEORGE NEAL SID# 02627182 TDCJ# 01002786 Violation# 12366489

It is alleged that you have violated one or more of the rules/conditions of your release. Your rights in the revocation process are listed below.

1. You have the right to be personally served with written notice of the rules and conditions you are accused of violating. That means you have the right to have someone give you written information of what conditions of release you are accused of breaking.
2. You have the right to have a preliminary hearing if you have not been convicted of a new offense. This hearing will be held at or near the place of the alleged parole or mandatory supervision violation. The purpose of the preliminary hearing is to determine whether there is probable cause or reasonable grounds to believe you violated a condition of release.
3. You have the right to have a revocation hearing if you are alleged to have committed technical violations or you are found guilty in a criminal case. However, if you receive a felony conviction with a term of incarceration in a penal institution, you will be allowed only a limited hearing in order to explain why you should not be revoked. You must request this mitigation hearing.
4. You have the right to a disclosure of evidence against you. That means you can see everything before the hearing.
5. You have the right to a state appointed attorney under certain circumstances to be determined by a hearing officer. If you qualify for that right, an attorney will be appointed to represent you. If you do not qualify for that right, you may hire an attorney to represent you.
6. You have the right to be heard in person by telling a hearing officer what happened and to present evidence such as witnesses, affidavits, letters and documents in support of your position.
7. You have the right to confront and cross-examine adverse witnesses by asking questions at the hearing unless the hearing officer specifically finds good cause for not allowing you to do so.
8. You are entitled to be heard on the violations by someone designated by the panel.
9. If your parole or mandatory supervision is revoked as a result of a hearing, you will receive a written report by the hearing officer which sets forth the evidence relied upon in support of a finding that you violated one or more conditions of your parole or mandatory supervision.
10. If revoked as a result of a hearing, you may have the right to request that the Board of Pardons and Paroles reopen the revocation hearing within sixty [60] days from the date of the Board's decision.

As indicated by my signature below, I affirm that I have been advised of my rights in the revocation process.
